

Hi, my name is Doanna Daoud and I am currently an F2 at The University Hospital of North Durham in the North East and I have had the pleasure of working alongside the UKFPO as a fellow. In my role as a UKFPO fellow, I've embarked on an enriching journey of discovery in leadership and management within the realm of medicine. Immersed in meetings that unveil the intricate layers of healthcare, I've found excitement in exploring a different facet of the profession. Crafting my own project, I've delved deep into the nuances of project development and navigating the complexities of creating a national teaching course. Forging connections with diverse professionals has been instrumental in my professional growth, offering insights into my own capabilities as a future leader in medicine.

One highlight of my experience was judging oral presentations at the UKFPO presentation day, a newfound skill that I otherwise may have not been able to explore as an F2. As a creative individual, I thrive on the process of creation, and this role has illuminated the possibilities for innovation within the medical field. Through these experiences, I've come to realize my potential to lead with creativity in a domain often governed by tradition, laying the groundwork for a future defined by inventive approaches to healthcare leadership.
